AIC'S SECURITY IMPLEMENTATION METHODOLOGY

Security Plan

Define the scope and objectives of the security implementation, estimate the resources required and create a time-line for analysis, configuration, testing and migration to production status.

Security Requirements

Review current security controls, identify users, tasks performed, access levels, identify business controls needed and what resources must be secured

Security Model

Create an analytical model of the key user roles, user groups, user tasks, access rules and secured resources for the organization. Use this model to create a plan for the security implementation.

Security Configuration

Build a customized security model for the client organization into the 9.0 Lawson Security product. Use the security administration tools supplied by Lawson to set up security roles, classes, rules and user attributes.

Security Testing

Perform unit testing as proof-of-concept for the security model and conduct user acceptance testing to validate and obtain approval for the new security configuration as a whole.

Migration to 9.0 Security

Implement 9.0 Lawson Security as part of the overall go-live if the client is new to Lawson or migrates in appropriate stages if the client is upgrading to 9.0.
